SMPC's earnings are expected to recover significantly in 2024F (growth in the 35%-48% YoY range) on the back of recoveries in sales volume and gross margin. A premium valuation could be assigned to reflect the significant recovery.

Impact

Recap on 2023 earnings: Sharp drop YoY

SMPC earlier reported a 2023 net profit of Bt371mn (-55% YoY). The decline was due to significant drops in sales and gross margin. Sales came to Bt3.8bn (-27% YoY), as sales volume contracted 13% YoY from 6.2mn units in 2022 to 5.4mn units in 2023. This was due to demand contracting amid concerns about the global economy (especially demand from North America). Gross margin fell to a 10-year low at 17.6% (-8.1ppts YoY), as there was greater competition and smaller economies of scale from softer sales volume. SG&A to sales improved to 10.6% (vs 11.2% in 2022) as the freight situation returned to normal. Net margin was 9.7% (vs 15.8% in 2022).

Earnings should pick up YoY and QoQ in 1Q24F...

Sales volume showed signs of picking up in 1Q24F after a recovery in demand, as LPG cylinders are a necessary product and there is less concern about the global economy. A rise in sales volume would imply a better utilization rate and possibly better economies of scale. This would imply potential improvement in the gross margin. As a result, the company's 1Q24F earnings could rise both YoY and QoQ.

...as well as for the full year

Management anticipates sales volume to recover this year and targets sales volume of 6.8mn units (+26% YoY) as demand in every region recovers. Reaching economies of scale from sales volume rising while the baht depreciates would boost the gross margin as well. Management expects a gross margin of around 20% (vs. its 10-year average (2014-2023) at 23.1%). Based on the company guidance, SMPC's earnings 2024F should reach around Bt500-550mn, equivalent to EPS of Bt0.90 – Bt1.00, implying earnings growth of 35% YoY to 48% YoY.

Valuation

SMPC is not rated. Potential earnings recovery in 2024F with a growth rate of 35%-48% YoY could lead to some premium for the share price. Given an EPS of Bt1.00 (based on assumed sales volume of 6.8mn units and GPM of 20.0%), SMPC's share price could be in the range of Bt11.00 and Bt15.00 (based on PER 11.0x (historical average) and 15.0x (+1.0 S.D historical average).
